German ancient family Mumms that trace their ancestry back to the barons and knights from the 12th century started the wine merchandise in Cologne.

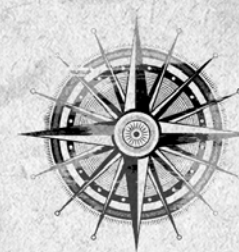

In 1827, the von Mumms established the G.H. Mumm champagne house in Reims. Since 1875, they have been using the label Cordon Rouge (red ribbon).

Regarding its German origin, the brand faced a series of difficulties during wars. Their success was brought back to life by René Lalou, whose name was given to one of their prestige cuvées.

Nowadays, they are ones of the most successful champagne producers in the world and they are one of champagne suppliers to British Royalty.

R·u·m·s

Rum is an alcoholic spirit made from fermented sugar cane juice or from its residues. Nowadays, it is estimated that over 1000 producers generate more than 6000 brands.

There are two ways to produce rum. Rum made from sugar cane juice is called agricole rum and is typical for French colonies. Rum made from molasses, a sugar cane residue, is called traditional or industrial. By aging in wooden barrels, 10% of rum evaporates each year. This is called the “angel tax”.

Caribbean rum from English speaking islands is usually darker with a full taste and a typical molasses flavour. This is typical for Antigua, Trinidad and Tobago, Grenada, Barbados, Saint Lucia, Belize, Bermudas, Guyana, and Jamaica. Typical Jamaican rum variety is so-called “rude rum” that is characteristic for its high alcohol content. It was popular mainly among ska artists, who used to dilute it with water or coke.

French speaking islands are known for rum that is made from sugar cane juice, instead of molasses. This rum is usually more expensive as sugar cane juice has a higher value than molasses. These rums have a characteristic stronger flavour of the initial sugar cane. Typical producers of this rum are Haiti, Guadeloupe, or Martinique.

Spanish speaking countries such as Cuba, Guatemala, Panama, Dominican Republic, Nicaragua, Puerto Rico, Columbia, or Venezuela produce typical añejo rums that have very smooth and balanced taste.

Ron Zacapa Centenario 23

Without hesitation, Ron Zacapa may be labelled as a symbol of popular premium rums as a separate sub-category. It is Guatemalan rum made from virgin sugar cane honey that is processed in a distillation column and ages using a solera system in ca. 2300 meters above sea level. The rum is then stored in untoasted and later charred barrels that had held bourbon, oloroso sherry, and sherry Pedro Ximénez. During maturation, it is blended with long-aged rums, resulting in a spirit of an exceptional quality aged between 6 and 23 years on average.

149 CZK

Rum production in the Caribbean is partly credited to Christopher Columbus, who had carried the sugar cane seeds to present-day Haiti and Dominican Republic. The sugar cane production then spread from an island to another and in the 17th century, molasses distillation was very common.

Ron Diplomatico Reserva Exclusiva

Ron Diplomatico Reserva Exclusiva is a blend of exclusive rum reserves aged for up to 12 years. It is the most popular renowned Venezuelan rum with over 20 awards to its name from prestigious international competitions. It is popular for chocolate pairing with a custom-made artisanal chocolate by XC Alchemy chocolaterie.

129 CZK

Ron Millonario XO

Millonario XO is a blend of rum reserves aged for up to 20 years that aged in American white oak barrels that had held bourbon before, and also in barrels after Pedro Ximénez sherry using a solera system aging process. The result is elegant, velvety smooth rum with a sweet taste and a touch of dark chocolate. Millonario XO is the only rum in the world that is available in a magnum-size bottle.

129 CZK

Dos Maderas Selección

Dos Maderas Selección is a blend of premium rum Dos Maderas 5 + 5 PX with the best 10 year old rums from Barbados and Guyana. This results in a palate that at first offers dry flavours of 10 year old Caribbean rum that evolves into smooth sweet notes of sherry Pedro Ximénez. Higher alcohol content (42% ABV) gives it a distinguished rum character, yet it maintains a pleasant round aftertaste.

129 CZK

Dos Maderas P.X. 5+5 10 Years Old

100% sugar cane Caribbean rum with a three stage maturing process. First it rests for five years in oak barrels right in the Caribbean. After that, it matures three more years at the Williams & Humbert facilities in Spain, in oak casks again. Finally, the third two-year long stage takes place in barrels that have previously aged sweet sherry Pedro Ximénez for 20 years. It has a harmonious aroma with a hint of raisins and figs and a very delicate, complex, and warming flavour.

119 CZK

Gin is a distilled alcoholic drink with a typical bitter flavour derived from juniper berries that are the gin's main ingredient. Gin was originally created as a medieval herbal medicine to treat various diseases, mainly kidney diseases. The name gin is a shortened form of the older English word "genever", or else juniper. The word genever has a Dutch origin from Latin "juniperus", or juniper again.

Gin

Juniper

A Dutch physician Franciscus Sylvius is believed to be the founder of gin, originally a medicine for kidney diseases, around 1650. Nevertheless, gin was already mentioned in a theatre play The Duke of Milan by Philip Massinger in 1623, when Sylvius was only 9 years old. It is probable that a gin-like drink was created during the Eighty Years' War between Spain and Netherlands. Many small Dutch distilleries in the 17th century made juniper popular, together with other herbs such as coriander, aniseed, and many others. In this century, gin was also introduced to the British Islands thanks to William of Orange. Gin became popular in England in the 18th century, as the unlicensed gin production was allowed and foreign alcoholic drinks were burdened by high customs duties.

Generous Gin

The story behind French gin Generous started with a dream of such a spirit that would resemble the Garden of Eden with a perfect harmony between various flavours that nature can offer. The result is a balanced, surprisingly soft and fragrant gin that matches exceptionally refreshing fruity, floral, and spicy notes in a perfect harmony.

139 CZK

Gin Tanqueray
London Dry

Original London Dry. Tanqueray uses only four botanical ingredients: juniper, coriander seed, angelica root, and liquorice. The result is the purest variety of the original London Dry gin with a perfect balance between taste and aroma. An interesting fact - some people mistakenly believe that the bottle design was inspired by a fire hydrant. The truth is that the bottle was designed to resemble a three-piece cocktail shaker.

59 CZK

Gin Brockmans
London Dry

The goal of Brockmans owners was to create a gin that would be unprecedented. The selection of botanicals used for the production includes juniper, blueberries, blackberries, cassia bark, liquorice, lemon peel, coriander, angelica root, orange peel, almond, and orris root. The outcoming gin has distinct notes of juniper and coriander combined with juicy notes of blueberries and blackberries.

Vodka is made by multiple filtrations and distillations to reach the purest flavour and get rid of undesirable aromas. Repeated distillation and filtration of vodka makes its alcohol content even 95% - that is why it is diluted with water before bottling.

Vodka

Vodka is perceived as a colourless spirit with a neutral aroma and flavour. It is made from grains, but also from potatoes, and other ingredients. The historical or geographical origin of vodka is not certain. There is a traditional heated debate between Russians and Poles, but also other Northern European nations claim to have invented it.

Eikō is the first Japanese vodka in the European market. It is made from Japanese grain and crystal clear water from Hokkaidō. This vodka is three times distilled and four times filtered through a unique filtration of sand and coal. Eiko means "glory" in Japanese.

Vodka manufactured in West Dorset by a dairy farmer Jason Barber. It is the world's first vodka made from nothing but pure whole milk. The aroma is softly sweet with notes of vanilla. It has a smooth creamy and sweet taste with a touch of cinnamon. It has a warming, clean finish.

Bitters are spirits with a dominant sharp to bitter taste. The first notes about bitters can be traced back to medieval apothecaries where alchemists were trying to find a recipe for the elixir of life. It is tricky to describe the production of bitters as many ingredients and processes are kept a secret by individual manufacturers

Aperol

The bittersweet classic with notes of Italian sun. It was introduced in 1919 by the family company of Barbieri brothers in Padua. It is an aperitif with a fruity bitter flavour. It is mainly popular as Aperol Spritz. It falls into the category of spicy bitters. It has a tempting red-orange colour and a bitter flavour with notes of fruits. It is made with gentian, rhubarb, orange extracts, aromatic herbs and dyes.

Averna Amaro Siciliano

Averna is an Italian herbal amaro-type liqueur that was originally made to support digestion. Its closely hidden recipe was born in the beginning of the 19th century in a Benedictine monastery in Sicilian Caltanissetta. In 1868, the recipe was given to merchant Salvatore Averna by a fray Girolamo as a token of gratitude for his commitment to the village. The liqueur is known for its soft citrus fragrance with notes of typical Mediterranean herbs such as myrtle, juniper, rosemary, sage, and aromatic resin. It is velvety bitter in the mouth carrying notes of orange, liquorice, and herbs.

49 CZK

Becherovka

Becherovka is a traditional Czech herbal liqueur that was originally used as stomach drops. Becherovka is made from water from Karlovy Vary, quality spirit, and a secret blend of herbs and spices. The hidden recipe is known only to the production manager and director of development and production strategy. The production process starts with a maceration of herbs and spices in a concentrated alcohol at a specific temperature. Becherovka is credited to Josef Vitus Becher who used to experiment with alcohol production in Karlovy Vary, with liqueurs in particular.

Tequila

Tequila is a spirit distilled from fermented juice from Blue agave heads. Blue agave is grown in the state of Jalisco in Mexico. Tequila has been around since the 16th century when the Spanish conquerors started to distil the fermented agave juice.

Tequila is made from Blue agave that must grow for 7 to 10 years before it is ready to be harvested. Agave is harvested individually as they do not ripe at the same time and unripe agaves have a low content of starch. One agave weighs 60 to 100 kg. It takes 7 kg of agave to produce 1 litre of 100% Blue agave tequila.

Don Julio Reposado

While it ages during 8 months in American white oak barrels, it obtains its delicate yet complex taste profile. Its smooth honey flavour carries elegant notes of dark chocolate and vanilla combined with a touch of cinnamon and soft notes of pears and apples. It has a velvety warming finish that reminds of dried fruits and nuts, and an unmistakable flavour of cooked agave.

175 CZK

Don Julio Añejo

This tequila carries the name of Don Julio Gonzalez who was the first one to create ultra-premium tequila from 100% Weber Blue agave. The whole production process is closely supervised, from planting individual agaves and their harvesting by hand, through slow cooking and distillation in copper stills, to bottling into serial numbered design bottles. Nowadays, Don Julio is the best-selling ultra-premium tequila in Mexico. Don Julio Añejo ages for 18 months and it has notes of red fruits and fudge on the taste.

Whiskey

Whiskey is a spirit made from a variety of grains, aged in oak barrels to obtain the colour, aroma, and taste. Both spellings of the word, whisky and whiskey, are correct. Whiskey is an original word for the spirit, used in Ireland and in the United States. It is spelled whisky in Scotland, Canada, Japan, and Wales.

Scotch whisky

It is usually twice distilled. It is made from barley that is dried over a peat-heated fire. That is why Scotch has a "peaty" aroma.

Irish whiskey

It is three times distilled and aged in oak barrels for three years. The malted grain is dried in a large closed kiln to secure the malty flavour and to avoid hints of smoke and peat.

American whiskey

Bourbon is the most recognized American whiskey originated in Kentucky. Bourbon legislation states that it must be made from a grain mixture that is at least 51% corn.

Canadian whisky

Canadian whisky is usually made from rye or several different grains.

Japanese whisky

Japan started to produce its own whisky around 1923 yet in such a short time their single malt and blended whiskies are internationally renowned.

Single Malt Whisky

Single malt whisky is produced by a single distillery using a single malted grain. It takes three ingredients to make it - barley, water, and yeast. There are five stages of the production process - malting, mashing, fermentation, distillation, and maturation. The result usually has a very strong taste.

Blended whisky

Blended whisky entered our market in the second half of the 19th century and it has been the best-selling type of whisky till nowadays. The manufacturing process includes up to forty kinds of malt and grain whiskies. The resulting taste is much gentler compared to the single malt.

Single Grain whisky

It can be made from any cereal grain, not only barley, such as corn or wheat. The majority of single grains are made to be blended. Nevertheless, there are single grains in the market that are individually bottled.

Vatted Malt Whisky

The origin behind the word "Vatted" is derived from "vatting", blending whiskies made from the same ingredient - malt with malt, grain with grain. This whisky is often labelled as "Pure Malt Whisky", in Czech language "barrel whisky".

Bourbon

Bourbon is a whiskey made in the United States. The mash used for distillation must contain at least 51% corn. It must not exceed 80% ABV during distillation. Then it is stored in oak barrels at not more than 62.5% ABV.

Bourbon Whiskey Bulleit

Bulleit comes from Kentucky and it is inspired by a 150 year old family recipe. It is delicate and complex due to a unique ratio of rye, corn, and barley malt and a special yeast kind. It contains three times more rye than other bourbons resulting in a distinct spicy taste with a clean and pleasing finish.

Liqueurs

Liqueurs are sweetened and flavoured spirits. They were originally invented in apothecaries, monasteries, and alchemists' workshops in the middle ages. The first trustworthy note by Lucas Bols is dated back to 1575. It was a way how medieval monks tried to refresh exhausted pilgrims. The cradle of liqueurs is Italy with its harbours importing spices from all over the world that were further transported to the rest of Europe.

Grand Marnier
Gordon Rouge

The Grand Marnier Cordon Rouge recipe was invented by Louis-Alexandre Marnier Lapostolle already in 1880. It is based on real cognac with an essence of tropical oranges and other selected ingredients. The essence is made from a particular wild orange variety Citrus bigaradia. The fruits are harvested by hand on Marnier-Lapostolle plantations in the Caribbean. Grand Marnier is also a part of the French dessert Crêpes Suzette.

Fassbind Vieille Poire
Old Pear

Swiss fine spirits Fassbind have been well-known for their quality for decades. They have a characteristic clear and full-bodied flavour. Vieille Poire is made with ripe Williams pears. After distillation, it is stored in oak barrels followed by 12 to 18 months of maturing. The resulting spirit is refined with a natural dried William pear extract that provides this multi-award fruit brandy with a delicately elegant sweet flavour with intense pear notes.

Vermouths

Vermouths are aromatized wines that gain their character from aromatic substances and herbs, such as wormwood, angelica, elderflower, gentian, clove, rhubarb, summer savoury, etc. Vermouth is made from grape wine (around 80% in Italian ones). This wine must be white, ideally with a neutral aroma and taste, with a suitable acidity, mature, and perfectly stabilized. Another vermouths' ingredients are spices and herbs. The third part consists of the cleanest neutral spirit with a minimum 96% ABV. The last ingredient is sugar that gives vermouths their full body and refines them. To dye red vermouths, only caramel colouring is allowed.

There are sweet and dry vermouths. Sweet ones are either white or red, dry ones are either Italian or French

Cinzano Bianco

Giovanni Cinzano created the first Cinzano Bianco in 1757. It is fragrant and whole, yet very soft. Aromas of fresh herbs, lemon, and spices are highly refreshing and pleasant. It is friendly and stylish.

Cognac

VS (very special) – at least 2 years
VSOP (very superior old pale) or
Réserve – at least 4 years
XO (extra old) – at least 10 years

Cognac is the most popular type of brandy made primarily from grapes. Strict requirements set by BNIC (Bureau National Interprofessionnel du Cognac) must be met in order to call the spirit cognac.

- ♦ It must come from the Cognac region in West France. This region is further divided into six growth areas (crus). Grapes from different sub-regions may be blended. If only grapes grown in the sub-region Grande Champagne are used and they are the Ugni Blanc variety, it is possible to label this cognac as Premier Cru du Cognac.
- ♦ Only Ugni Blanc, Folle Blanche, and Colombard white grape varieties can be used.
- ♦ It must age in oak barrels for at least 2 years after the end of the distillation season (from the 1st April of the year following the harvest year).
